Initiatives Evaluation Criteria

Needs	Approach
Benefits	Cooperation
Innovation	Sustainability
Media partnership

What is new in Stars4Media Second Edition:

- New role for coaches/jury members: active before and after the evaluation process
- Continuous guidance throughout application and implementation phase to allow initiative leaders overcome challenges and stick to the initial plan while ensuring initiative's results are met.

Stars4Media Second Edition: Tips & Tricks

The development of a service, a content, an editorial format, a product, an internal work-process that creates a new revenue line or strengthens an existing one.

The cooperation of 2 or 3 media organisations for the realization of a service that responds to a need of the media sector that is still unanswered

The creation of a key product/service for your company with the involvement of one or more professionals whose skills were not usually considered for that product/service

A journalistic reportage/product that does not involve any element of change with the usual methods already applied to carry on key operations in the companies involved

A new story. The innovative element should not lie exclusively in the content. The innovative aspect can be at the editorial level, but it has to address how stories are presented (format) or how a certain topic is narrated (angle and tone)

A product/service/technology that transforms practices but does not ensure financial sustainability
